Lawyers Prepare To Fight Battle To Supreme Court

(Associated Press)

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 28.—Reprieved from the gallows for three months by Governor Trumbull, Gerald Chapman, convicted for murdering a policeman, is acting as one of the lawyers for himself. In a five-page brief written with pen and ink in his cell and bristling with legal terminology, he contends that President Coolidge has immorally and unlawfully employed the executive power as an instrument of force. The president has commuted Chapman's sentence of 25 years at Atlanta for robbing the mails in order that Chapman may hang in connection with the killing of a policeman in Connecticut after he had escaped from Atlanta. Chapman's lawyers plan to "go as far as the supreme court if necessary" to prove that he should serve his federal sentence before being executed in Connecticut.

Chapman was sentenced to die next Thursday but the Governor yesterday reprieved him until March because of the habeas corpus proceedings which will be argued Monday before federal court.

Criticism of President Coolidge for signing his commutation is the keynote of the brief the condemned man prepared. Chapman's contentions are "that the power to pardon and the power to commute are not two separate instruments—that the essential spirit of the instrument is for forgiveness and mercy—and that its privileges shall be gifts and not penalties or iniquitous forces to place lives and liberties in further jeopardy."

It is not within this power to subvert.

Candidates For Senate Spends The Day In North Alabama

Thomas E. Kilby, of Anniston, candidate for the United States senate to succeed Senator Oscar W. Underwood, accompanied by Harry Ayres, well known publisher of the Anniston Star, were in the Twin Cities for a short time today. Later they went to Athens and planned to return home this evening.

Mr. Kilby's present visit to North Alabama was a flying one. He came here to see a few intimate friends and managers and plans to return to the Tennessee Valley shortly after the first of the year when he will spend several days renewing acquaintances in the northern part of the state.

Mr. Kilby is well known to all Alabamians, having served as counselman of Anniston, mayor of that city, state senator, lieutenant governor and then governor, during which time he made a splendid financial record. In addition to his public service, Mr. Kilby is recognized as an able business man and is head of the Kilby Iron company.

Son Narrowly Escapes Death In Effort To Save Currency

(Associated Press)

CORINTH, Miss., Nov. 28.—Seven thousand dollars in currency was burned to a crisp shortly before midnight Thursday when fire destroyed the home of T. H. Nelms, near Corinth.

Roy Nelms, a son, narrowly escaped death, while in a futile effort to save the money. He had hardly escaped the flaming building when a portion of the roof collapsed and all but hemmed him in the burning structure. Nelms finally escaped, bleeding from bruises and with his clothing ablaze. His condition is not regarded as serious, however.

Fully $5,000 of the money which burned had recently been collected by Mr. Nelms from a company which had insured his cotton crop against fire loss. The Nelms crop was burned in a fire which destroyed a cotton compress here on the night of November 12.

Mr. Nelms was at his farm, near Pontotoc at the time of the fire and Mrs. Nelms, who was asleep, was aroused by neighbors and made her escape. Roy Nelms resided a short distance away and was awakened by the fire alarm. The Nelms' home is a mile and a half west of Corinth.

Payroll Also Falls To Bandit Gang At Rochester

(Associated Press)

WISCONSIN RAPIDS, Wis., Nov. 28.—Two mysterious masked gunmen stalked into a roadhouse, half a mile from the city, last night, and shot two men as they sat listening to a radio concert. R. A. Davis, a farmer, was killed instantly, a bullet ploughing through his brain. William Bauer, also a farmer, was shot in the abdomen and was not expected to live.

The killers challenged their intended victims before firing.

"Davis, we want you," calmly announced the taller of the two. Then he fired from the hip. "Bauer, you are next," said the other as he fired.

The gunmen then backed out and escaped in an automobile.

Frank Flatoff, proprietor of the roadhouse, was sitting between Davis and Bauer when the killers began shooting.

Mystery was added to the case by the fact that apparently Bauer and Davis were strangers.

Bauer declared he had never seen Davis until last night when he met him at the roadhouse. Robbery was not attempted.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Kidnapping William McManus, driver of a motor truck, five robbers in Brooklyn today escaped with a truck load of crude rubber, valued at between $50,000 and $80,000.

After the driver had been bound and gagged he was carried in an automobile to the Bronx, approximately 15 miles from the scene of the robbery before he was released. Although several pedestrians saw the kidnapping, the hold-up men made their escape with the truck. It was later found in another section of Brooklyn. The rubber had been removed.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 28.—Four masked bandits, using a stolen taxi and at the points of revolvers, today stole $5,900 cash from Conrad Ward, head of C. T. Ward, Inc., general contractors. The money was for a payroll.

EDITORIAL 'SCOOPS'
THE NEWS COLUMNS

Technicality Reported To Have Occurred In Morgan County

It is not often that the editorial columns of a newspaper scoop the news columns, but such seems to have occurred in The Daily office.

In Friday's issue reference was made to a technicality by which a decision of a lower court was reversed when the letters "it" were left out of an indictment charging violation of the prohibition laws.

Information received this morning indicated that the case had been tried in this county, in the Morgan county court, and letters "it" were left out of the word "prohibited" in the framing of the indictment, and the defense counsel demurred to the indictment when the case was called. Judge Lowe, however, took the position that the intention of the indictment was sufficiently clear and the case went on trial, resulting in a fine being assessed by the jury.

The defense, however, carried the case to the higher court with the result that it was reversed.

REQUEST ELECTION
BY ALBANY VOTERS
ON CHANGE OF PLAN

Papers Are Addressed To Probate Judge L. P. Troup

ONLY VOTERS
ASKED TO SIGN

Court Is Requested To Examine Signatures and Certify Fact

Petitions today made their appearance, asking that an election be called in the City of Albany in order that the voters of the city may determine whether or not they desire to change the present aldermanic form of government to the commission form.

The petitions were directed to L. P. Troup judge of probate of Morgan County, with the request that he examine the signatures of such petitions and determine whether or not they are signed by the required number and if so, to certify the fact to the mayor of Albany.

The petitions were being placed in local drug stores and also were reported being circulated. Citizens were requested not to sign the petitions unless they are qualified voters.

The petition read as follows: The State of Alabama, Morgan County, City of Albany.

To the Hon. L. P. Troup, Judge of Probate of Morgan County, Alabama in which county and state the City of Albany, a municipal corporation, is located.

We, the undersigned qualified electors of the City of Albany, a municipal corporation, located in Albany, Morgan County, Alabama the said city having a population of more than 1,000 and not more than 25,000 according to the last federal census and which, under the provisions of Article 46, of Chapter 43 of the political code of Alabama 1923 is a class "D" city, desire that the said city of Albany may become organized under the commission form of government as authorized in said article, and we do further desire that the question of organizing said city under said article shall be submitted to the qualified electors of said city at a special election to be held as provided in said article, to the end that the said city may become organized under the commission form of government.

We do, therefore, respectfully petition your honor as Judge of Probate, of Morgan County, Alabama, and ask that the proposition of organizing the said city under the provisions of said article be submitted to the qualified electors of said city at a special election to be held for the purpose as authorized and provided in said article to the end that said city may become organized under the commission form of government as herein provided.

We do further petition your honor as Judge of Probate as aforesaid and request that you examine this petition and determine whether or not it is signed by the requisite number of qualified electors of said city to authorize such election, and that if you so find, you certify such fact to the Mayor of the City of Albany in order that such election may be made.

(Do not sign this petition unless you are a qualified voter of the city of Albany)

SYNOPSIS

Connemara Moore, instead of announcing her engagement tonight, as she was expected to do, stole away from Aunt Celimena's, being assisted in her escape by young David Lacy, whom she had never seen before. There followed hours of wild adventure, in the company of strangers who talked much of rum-running. Now Lacy, aboard a motor boat, believes he has refound Connie—who was lost—but the woman he is addressing keeps her face veiled.

CHAPTER XII—Continued

"I'm beginning to think I'm in earnest. I'm wishing we were both out of this. I'm wishing we were out somewhere on the plains of Kansas where there's a train once a day and the biggest excitement of the year is a church supper followed by stereopticon slides of the Holy Land."

"Don't be silly," said Aunt Celimena, who was really having a better time than she had had for years. "I'm silly because I'm scared," said David Lacy. "Don't you know that's the way frightened people always act in fiction? Think of the noble heroes of the war jesting under shell fire. The more certain the death, the higher the grade of humor."

Aunt Celimena cleared her throat again. "How much more dangerous do you think our situation will have to become before the quality of a certain gentleman's levity becomes shall we say, heightened?" "Unkind," said Lacy, "but I laid myself open to it. It's difficult not to sweat the easy balls hard, even though you put them out." He stopped. "I feel I shall be of service to you yet, though, before this little joy ride is over."

"I feel you have been already," said Aunt Celimena. Then she turned her face full upon him and by the palish light of an intermittent moon she studied his features with what might be considered ill-bred intensity.

"My God," said Lacy. "Yes," she said. "I thought so. It was Auntie. Your face comes back to me now, slowly, and completely lacking in pleasurable associations."

Lacy stared. "Your face doesn't come back to me at all, but I must say that the present sight is shorn of glamour."

"Naturally you don't remember me," snapped Aunt Celimena. "You were not looking at me but at some one else."

"I always said I had a record for taste and discrimination," murmured Mr. Lacy.

"And now," said Aunt Celimena, "where is my niece?"

"Connemara."

"Well, considerably safer than we are," said Lacy.

"What do you mean?"

"Why, since you're not she, she escaped with McTish."

"Who's McTish?"

"Oh, a man of parts," said Lacy noncommittally. "I think you'd like him, and with any luck we'll meet up with him again some time this night."

"Young man," said Aunt Celimena, "was it my niece's plan to be abducted by you this evening, or your own?"

"Or possibly a collaboration?" suggested Mr. Lacy.

"It will make considerable difference to me in the altering of a certain document." Her face was grim.

"My lawyer, Mr. Brewster, is on board too."

REMEMBERS FIREMEN

Thirty firemen had their Thanksgiving made more enjoyable by Roy

Wyatt who turned over a check for $10 to the department for the purchase of a Thanksgiving day feed.

SYNOPSIS

Aunt Celimena, searching for her niece, Connemara Moore, finds herself—on Connie's board a mysterious motorboat in Long Island Sound. Young David Lacy, thinking he is in Connemara's company, discusses sweetly, but becomes more abrupt when he discovers his mistake. Connemara was to have announced her engagement tonight, but disappeared from auntie's Connecticut home. And what a night of adventure it has been!

CHAPTER XII—Continued

"An' you fool enough to still try to run for it," he said in frank disgust. "You ain't never been much loaded up with brains, Swede, an' that's certain." "O' course," he added placatingly. "If you'd bumped off the Scotchman, that'd been different again. But with him loose, an' all this crew on board, we ain't going outside on no run tonight. Not us! You call Doc in on this. He's got a bean on him. He'll back me up."

The Swede appeared reluctant, but somewhat impressed by this logic.

"Well-ll," he muttered, doubtfully. "You want to head back to the usual place, then, an' lay low till tomorrow night. That it?"

"You're right, that's it," Pooch said with decision, "an' damn quick, too."

CHAPTER XIII

By Wallace Irwin
Connemara could swim; she'd learned when she was four years old and practiced every summer. While she had never reached the cup winning, near professional class, she handled herself in the water with such ease that "amphibious" was employed in her praising almost as often as "delicious" when in a very simple one-piece bathing suit she played in the Sound like a goldfish; a goldfish in a costly aquarium with castles and bridges and orchids, or even, to some observers, like an angel fish in the coral caverns of the southern seas.

"Home, Bugle, let's go home!"

But swimming in the dark in a tightish dress and high-heeled slippers are two different things. Instead of serving her as propellers, her legs seemed to be excess baggage.

"I don't know where we're going, but I'm on my way too," she said recklessly to McTish, when, after making a long, deep dive following him, she sped through the water and came up near him.

"Don't talk," he returned curtly, "and swim as quietly as you can."

It was very dark, and it was getting rough. McTish was on her right, and when she turned to look for him in the darkness, nasty little waves slapped her in the face. Still, she knew he was there, for talk as he might about swimming quietly, he was breathing like a grampus. And she could see a blob, less black—a little—than the night when she turned his way.

It was hard work to swim, impeded as she was. She stopped swimming, and, treading water, balancing herself in the waves as a real swimmer can, tried to kick off the silver slippers which so hampered her feet. But they were dancing slippers with complicated interlacing straps which, like the complications they had helped to weave, had first to be unfastened. McTish, she perceived indistinctly, was going past her. She gave up ridding herself of the slippers. They were a nuisance, but she could manage. The dress, however, was another matter and too great a burden.

"McTish!" she called. "Wait!" Treading water, she pushed up the belt which Sweetie had knotted so securely round her hips and managed to wriggle the whole thing off over her head, and let it go on the water.

"My new dress too," she sighed. It had been hard to do, and taken longer than she'd realized. She was getting cold. That McTish would leave her she had not dreamed; but, as in her new freedom she took long, powerful strokes, driving herself somewhere, she realized that he was not there. She was alone, alone in Long Island Sound, in the dark, in the middle of the night. She knew she should have been terrified, but after the preceding hours any peace, even a black and solitary peace, seemed grateful.

She did not feel the cold now, and swam easily for an hour, wondering with each stroke where it was taking her. The shore, she thought vaguely, could not be far ahead. Well, she was in no hurry; the shore when she reached it—if she did—would be just another problem. No place to go, no food, no clothes, no friends. And after this, anyone with whom she talked would be a friend or a policeman. No more chance acquaintances, please!

What a goose she had been! Marrying either of them, or both of them for that matter, would have been preferable to this adventure, since it had got wet and dirty and rough and lonesome. It was probably the lonesomeness which Connemara minded most, and next the fruitlessness. She'd lost a home and a sapphire bracelet, probably her reputation, maybe, even yet, her life. And what had she gained? Only experience, and that of dubious quality.

If she'd had her nerve, she told herself, she'd have kept that fifty thousand and let Aunt Celimena's money go hang. Then she might have married or not as she pleased, or started a shop or a movement, or gone on the stage or made candles or batiks. She's made a mess of it any way you took it. Even McTish had deserted her. Or had they just lost each other in the night?

She felt tired and turned over on her back to rest. Not a start, not a ray of light, and only the sound of water rushing past her ears, and the lap of little waves on her face. Was it very different from this when you died? Didn't you just see nothing and hear nothing, and feel nothing? She was feeling very little, oh, very little.

But she heard something. A small boat, probably a canoe by the muffled drip and swish, was coming near her. She heard low voices, on a basso grumble which carried distinctly. "Come, home, Bugle! That's a good boy!" And a heavy body splashed into the water. It began to swim. A curious stroke, thought Connemara, who knew all strokes by name. But this one she could not classify.

Connemara was as nearly frightened as she had ever been. The strange swimmer was coming nearer and nearer. What new terror was this night to hold? Whoever it was, was close beside her. She would float, and avoid any new encounter by attracting no attention. She was very tired, and unless she was sure it was a friend, she preferred to spend the rest of this night alone. Surely there was not much more of it.

Closer and closer the sound came. She took a long stroke, and the gurgling, puffing swimmer was upon her. That collision was a blessed thing, though not with man or woman. Wet fur brushed her shoulder, and the friend-seeking nose of a dog was thrust into her face.

"Nice boy!" she said quickly in a low voice, and awkwardly caressed him, meanwhile maintaining a precarious balance. The answer was a rumbling pleasant growl.

"Dear thing!" she whispered. "Home, Bugle, let's go home!"

For the first time since she had left the hampering peace of her aunt's house, where living had become so suddenly and completely complicated with hair and suitors and wills and working girls, Connemara felt she had a friend.

CONVICT BROTHERS OF FATHER'S DEATH

Eleven Years Sentence
Imposed On Two
In Luverne

(Associated Press)

LUVERNE, Ala., Nov. 28.—A verdict of second degree murder was reached here this morning at nine o'clock in the case of Furman and Marshall Merritt, brothers, charged with the murder of their father, Sam A. Merritt, Crenshaw county farmer.

The jury fixed the sentence at 11 years but it was suspended after the defendants filed notice of an appeal.

The Merritt brothers were removed to the Montgomery county jail, immediately after the verdict was announced. They expect to make bond during the day, according to their counsel.

The shooting occurred at the residence of the elder Merritt last September. In their testimony yesterday, the defendants claimed that they shot in self defense after their father had fired five times at them. They also testified that they went to the home of their father to see their sick mother, who died a few days after the shooting affray.

Cotton Reporting
Methods Talked

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Cotton reporting methods of the department of agriculture were discussed today at a conference between department officials and Representatives Black of Texas, Vinson of Georgia and Aawell of Louisiana, all democrats.

The discussion revolved around the time for cotton reports, which has been a recent subject of study by department officials and southern members of the senate and house. Legislation to change the present method will be introduced in the approaching congress, it is understood.

All Over Alabama

Coke is being shipped from Birmingham to Detroit in box cars at the present time, it has been learned, to prevent open top cars from being taken too far from the district. It is understood that the activity in the district has resulted in a shortage of cars.

The city council at Anniston is considering passing nearly 20 new traffic laws in an effort to cut down accidents. It is understood that laws bearing on reckless driving and jaywalking are included in the proposed laws now being considered.

An increase of more than 7,000 bales of cotton has been shown in cotton receipts at Montgomery since August 1, 1925 over the same period last year, it is reported.

Two new school buildings in Calhoun county will be ready for occupancy by the first of next year, it has been announced. One of the schools is at Evergreen and the other at Piedmont Springs. The combined cost of the two buildings is placed at $7,000.

About 1,000 Thanksgiving greeting cards were tied up in the Birmingham postoffice for lack of sufficient postage, it has been learned. It is said that it will cost $15 to collect the deficient $20 in postage.

A $20,000 cold storage plant, built for Burns Brothers and Kendrick, has been put in operation at Selma. It is understood that the plant will be used to store produce.

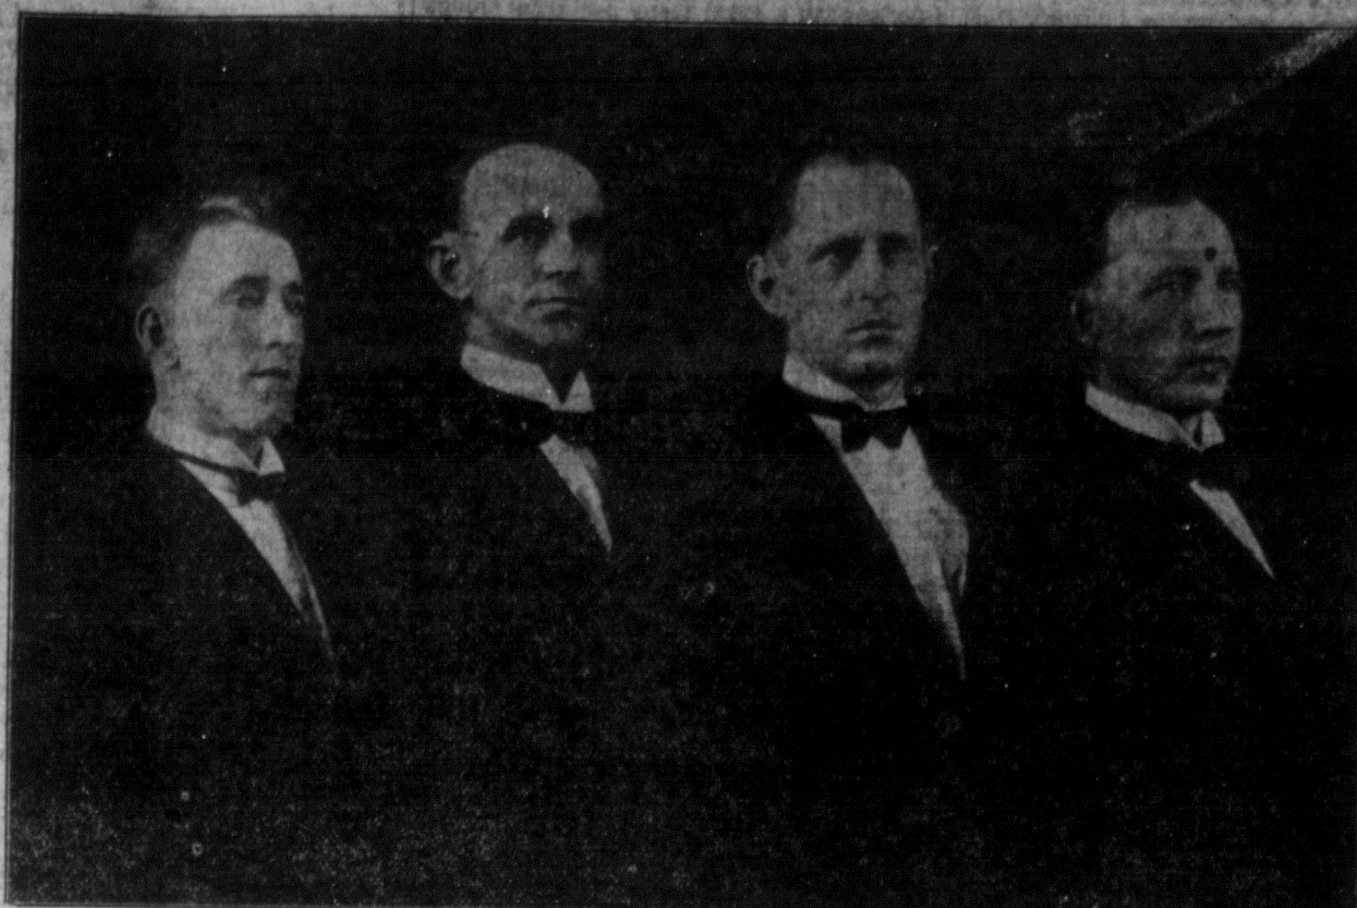

Contracts for the construction of a new city school have been let at Ensley, and it is expected that work will be started shortly. It is understood that the school will cost something over $75,000 which is about $268.33 per pupil the first year.

A Judson chapter, composed of former students of the school, has been organized at Troy. Mrs. Harvey McBride is president.

A movement is on foot at Sheffield to push the construction of a Union station between Sheffield and Tusculum. The Sheffield Kiwanians have already gone on record as favoring the project.

The Blackfriar players of the University of Alabama have opened their season with the presentation of an English comedy. The players are recruited from the student body of the school.

POPULAR SINGERS NOW PREPARING TO GO ON TOUR

A. V. Gilliam, G. E. McCulloch, C. L. Shook, C. F. Gardner.

Probably no other similar organ-year has appeared in practically every local production or entertainment, displaying a versatility in the condition of all classes of music. The popular quartette is now preparing to enter other fields, going on tour. The local audiences feel that success will be theirs before every audience in which they make an appearance. The personnel of the quartette includes: C. F. Gardner, 1st tenor; C. L. Shook, 2nd tenor; G. E. McCulloch, baritone and A. V. William basso.

Helpful Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

By Annie Laurie.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
I am a young girl in my teens. I have recently become acquainted with a young man whose friendship I value very much. I know from past happenings that he likes me.

One of my friends has forced herself upon him. How shall I treat this girl?
SALLY: Since this young man is not engaged to be married he has the privilege of seeing as many of his friends as he chooses. Sally. Consequently there is nothing you can, or ought to, do about the young lady who has "forced" her attentions upon him. Continue his friendship and don't worry about his other acquaintances.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
I am a girl seventeen years old and have been going with a young man of eighteen. We are engaged.

A few days ago he left the city with the firm for which he is working. Was it proper for me to have gone to the station with him?
BUBBLES: Since you are engaged to this young man, it was not only proper, but very nice for you to have seen him off, my dear.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
I am in love with a young man three years my junior. I get along very well now and just suit one another. I have been going out with him for several years and I'm sure I've had time to know him. I know the difference in our ages does not matter now. Do you think it would matter later?
LOVE EYES: If you have tastes and interests in common with this young man, I don't think the difference will matter much, my dear.

GENERALS FALL BEFORE GATORS

Carolina Goes Up To Third Place With Tie Count

(Associated Press)

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 28—Alabama and Tulane were left supreme in the Southern conference after games Thursday in which two undefeated and untied teams in the conference were toppled from the heights.

Alabama won going away from Georgia, 27 to 0. Tulane wound up its season with a 14 to 0 victory over Centenary but had finished its conference schedule last Saturday.

North Carolina retained its percentage of 1,000 but suffered a demerit mark on the ledger by failing to win from Virginia, the eleven from the Old Dominion getting a draw with the Tar Heels, 3 to 3.

Washington and Lee was shoved into fourth place when the Florida Alligators stopped the Generals in a free scoring game, 17 to 14.

Another game in which there was no lack of scoring punch gave Kentucky a 23 to 20 victory over Tennessee with the 'old charred keg' as a side trophy.

The conference close brought ties in two games by the same scores Georgia Tech and Auburn and Maryland and Johns Hopkins finishing in 7 to 7 deadlocks.

Vanderbilt trailed Sewanee for a time but finished with a drive that gave the Commodores an 19 to 7 triumph over the Purple from the mountains.

V. F. I. defeated V. M. I., its ancient rival, in a game that ran to form by developing into a real battle, the score being 7 to 0.

Clemson went outside the conference to take a licking from Furman 20 to 0, this marking the Hornets third victory over conference teams and making Furman winner of the mythical South Carolina state championship.

"Ole Miss" was able to defeat Millsaps, 21 to 0, and gain the runner-up position to the Mississippi Aggie in state warfare.

Mercer, representing the south in the only intersectional game of the day, was rebuffed 30 to 0, by Marquette at Milwaukee.

Final standing of conference teams:

SPORTS

King Football Gasps For Last Time As Army-Navy Teams Come Together Today

A battered and bleeding King Football, a bewildered personage over the season upsets, is breathing his last gasp today as the Army and Navy annual classic is being played at the Polo Grounds, before the most colorful crowd of the year. The classic is the big show of the east regardless of the Yale-Harvard-Princeton battles. The Army and the Navy furnish more than a football game, they offer a riot of color, original football spirit with all the trimmings of official service regalia.

The Army Mule has the edge over games lost and won in the 27 years the Navy Goat in the matter of playing and from season stands this year it seems likely that the Mule will repeat. Ed Garbisch furnished the points for the Mule last year at Baltimore when he kicked four field goals for the Mule's margin of victory. The Navy may be weak this year and the Mule enjoying the best of health in the matter of the season's percentage, but past records do not count when these two teams get into action. The Army and Navy battle always furnishes the finest dish in football thrills both teams offering every ounce of strength in the battle for supremacy. It is an Army year with the bulk of strength lying with the Pointers, but the Navy ship will not be sunk without a fight.

In the other scattered games over the nation Centre and South Carolina meet at Columbia, S. C. in the only Southern attraction. Bucknell on the way back from a win over Detroit will stop off for a shot at Dayton University. Lehigh tackles an ancient enemy in Carnegie Tech at Pittsburgh. Boston College and Holy Cross are meeting in Boston in what is heralded as a close struggle.

Thus does football leave the center of the stage for the present season and with many a pang of regret playing about the heartstrings of the followers of the gallant sport. Football fans may be apparently satisfied with baseball and basketball but it takes the crash of the 'indy' the chase down the sideline the call of the quarterback to stir red blood in their veins. Regret accompanies the close of a brilliant and unusual year.
